Stacey loves going to school. She doesn't never like to miss school. Emily, her best friend, is passionate about studies, too. Today Stacey was the first to arrive, and there wasn't no one around when she entered. Ms. Wells, who doesn't hardly miss an opportunity to reach a few minutes earlier and catch up with her essay corrections, was not there too. She looked at the clock and realized there were 10 minutes to 9. She didn't have no patience to wait. There wasn't barely any sign of Martha and Maria, her other friends, showing up either. She could find nobody nowhere. Stacey couldn't sit there doing nothing no longer. Suddenly she had an idea. There were a few pages left in the story from last night. No sooner had she not opened the book than the sound of her friends' footsteps were heard.
