

Phrasal Verbs

When we can separate the two words in a phrasal verb and insert the direct object in the middle, it's called a separable phrasal verb.

Example: He had proof to back up his theory.

He had proof to back his theory up.

Rewrite each sentence by separating the phrasal verb in it.

1) The company turned down the offer.

2) Alex paid back the entire amount to the customer.

3) They decided to called off tomorrow's match.

4) Mrs. Clark had to spell out everything for me.

5) Please cut out the chase scene.

When we can separate the two words in a phrasal verb and insert the direct object in the middle, it's called a separable phrasal verb.

Example: He had proof to back up his theory.

He had proof to back his theory up.

Rewrite each sentence by separating the phrasal verb in it.

1) The company turned down the offer.

The company turned the offer down.

2) Alex paid back the entire amount to the customer.

Alex paid the entire amount back to the customer.

3) They decided to called off tomorrow's match.

They decided to call tomorrow's match off.

4) Mrs. Clark had to spell out everything for me.

Mrs. Clark has to spell everything out for me.

5) Please cut out the chase scene.

Please cut the chase scene out.