chirped Charlie.

Fudge grinned and said, "Sure, Charlie! I could use a hand, or in your case, a wing."

Charlie fluttered down, carrying a tiny hammer and a bag of nails with his beak. Together, they worked on securing the planks to the tree trunk, making sure everything was level and sturdy.

Just as they finished the base, they heard rustling in the bushes below. Out popped Rosie, a clever rabbit with a knack for digging. "Need a cozy entrance, Fudge?" she asked with a twitch of her nose.

Fudge welcomed Rosie's help, and with her digging skills, they created a small tunnel leading to the treehouse. It would be their secret entrance munching on carrot cake. Fudge thanked his friends for their incredible help and companionship throughout the building process.

From that day on, Fudge's treehouse became a hub of adventure and friendship. Together with Charlie, Rosie, and Benny, he explored the forest, solved mysteries, and shared countless stories under the starry night sky. Fudge knew that with great friends and a little imagination, any dream could come true.
