Just when they were about to leave, a park ranger came over. The ranger pointed to the mess and the signs. Margaret felt bad. She knew they had done something wrong.

The ranger explained that they should have picked up their trash. Leaving it on the ground was against the rules. It's also not good for the park and the animals that live there.

Margaret and her friends felt embarrassed. They quickly picked up all the trash and put it in the garbage cans. The ranger thanked them for cleaning up and reminded them to follow the rules.

Margaret learned a big lesson that day. She realized that rules are important,
