

Scarcity and Choices

Check the boxes that introduce scenarios of scarcity.

- 1) You're at an ice-cream parlor, where there are many flavors to choose from. There's plenty of ice cream for everyone, and they can make as many scoops as they want.
- 2) You collect stamps, and you have one from every state in the country. You're missing the stamp from Hawaii, which is very hard to find.
- 3) Your teacher gives you a list of school supplies to buy for the year. The store has plenty of pencils, erasers, and notebooks for everyone.
- 4) A new video game is released, and all your friends want to play it. Your local game store has limited copies, and they sell out quickly.
- 5) At recess, you want to use the swings, but there's only one swing, and another student is already using it.
- 6) Your local library has a big selection of books, and you can check out as many as you want.
- 7) You're in a park on a hot summer day, and there's a water fountain. Many people are waiting in line to get a drink.
- 8) You and your friends order pizza, but there are only four slices left, and there are five of you.
- 9) Your soccer team needs jerseys for a big tournament. The coach has enough jerseys for everyone, and there are extras just in case.
- 10) You're on a treasure hunt, and you find a chest full of gold coins. There are enough coins for everyone in your group to have some.
