

Symbiosis

---

Identify if the relationships described are examples of interspecific competition, intraspecific competition, protective mimicry, or aggressive mimicry.

- 1) Lions and hyenas often compete for access to the same prey, such as wildebeests and zebras, in African savannas. Both species are apex predators and frequently engage in confrontations over food.

2)

Preview

Become a member to unlock unrestricted access to both printable and online worksheets.

www.tutoringhour.com

3)

type of relationship:

---

4)

Walking stick insects have evolved to resemble twigs, or branches, in their environment. This mimicry helps them avoid predators because they blend seamlessly with their surroundings, making them difficult to detect.

type of relationship:

---